

Support Type	In Practice
Exam paper in an alternative format	Large print, alternative colour or Braille exam papers can be provided.
25% Extra Time	This is a standard allocation and may be recommended for various reasons. To receive extra time allocation you will usually be scheduled to sit your exams at a location separate to your peer group. You could be sharing the room with other people receiving extra time or be on your own.
33% extra time	Usually recommended when the nature of your condition requires more than 25% or, if you require a combination of extra time and another provision.
Use of a computer	When using a computer for exams you may be sharing a room with other students using computers, or on your own. You will be required to save your exam script regularly throughout the exam to avoid losing work. Software available on the computer (e.g. spell check facilities) will be dependent on the requirements of your examination. You will be given instructions at each examination where you use a computer relating to the submission of your script in electronic or printed format.
Rest breaks (included within extra time allowance)	If you require rest periods during your exam due to physical demand or anxiety, you may be in a room with others requiring the same support or in a room on your own. Additional time allocated will be specified at either 25% or 33%.
Scribe	If you are to use a scribe during your exams you are encouraged to practice dictation techniques as part of your learning and revision and have practice sessions under exam conditions. Using a scribe during exams will necessitate the use of a separate individual room.
Reader	The support of a reader during your exams will be simply to read the questions as typed on the paper or read back your written answers. Readers will not elaborate or explain any aspects of the questions or provide any other assistance.
Separate room (individual allocation)	A separate room will usually be arranged in situations where a scribe, reader or computer with particular software are necessary. However, you may require a separate room specifically due to your disability.

Exam Paper and Other Documents in Alternative Formats	You may have a recommendation due to a visual disability to have an exam paper in Braille, large print or on different colour paper.
Consideration For Spelling And Grammar When Marked	If you use a scribe during your exam or if you have a specific learning difficulty such as dyslexia, you may be entitled to dispensation in marking for reasonable spelling and grammatical errors. This will be applied only for modules where spelling and grammar are identified as essential components of the assessment.
